

PRIDE PRESS

Spring 2024 Edition

Wow, another fantastic term for our PRIDE ambassadors! They are really getting into their roles now and beginning to see the impact of their hard work. Across school there is always a real buzz when our ambassadors are presenting their PRIDE value in assembly! The ambassadors have been working with various year groups, carrying out pupil voice sessions and providing many enrichment opportunities across all year groups.

See below to read more detail about what they have been up to.

Our ambassadors have continued to encourage a positive approach to learning and life for all pupils and staff across the school. We have led an assembly at the start of Well Being Week to explain different ways in which we can look after ourselves and others better.

Part of a positive approach looked at activities away from screen time. We learnt about the RSPB bird watch, why this was important, and the value of being present and observing nature. Children were encouraged to report their findings.

The choir continues to be a positive focus in school and those in the current choir will be attending a Trust Wide concert. We have also been singing in preparation for our Easter services at the end of this Term.

Our Respect Ambassadors carried out a Pupil Voice with a group of Key Stage

One and Two children to find out if our children feel safe at school and to discuss and identify what they think about bullying. The great news is, everybody feels safe in our school, and they were able to talk about who they can go to if they are worried or unsure about anything. From this pupil voice, our ambassadors identified that although our pupils know what bullying is, there was some confusion about the different types of bullying. Following this, they did a whole school assembly to explain the types of bullying and reinforce the idea of 'STOP' (Several times on purpose). They all had an active role in the assembly and got these important messages across clearly.

This term we have completed a learning walk around school to check the online safety displays were consistent across all classrooms. We have all supported in delivering our half termly online E-safety assemblies, encouraging children to limit their time online and making healthy choices.

We also had a follow up meeting with Councillor Mike Adams and he brought us some plans to look at, we put forward some great suggestions and it was great to be a part of it.

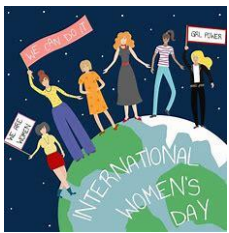

D etermination

Our team of ambassadors have continued to encourage our pupils to show determination on our Times-Table Rockstars app by handing out certificates during our Friday assemblies. We held a whole school assembly during which we discussed what determination is and collected good examples of determination we have shown in our school. Posters are being produced, using the examples pupils shared with us during our assembly, which encourage people to show determination in everything they do. Finally, we are also putting plans in place to celebrate determination during Sports Day.

E quality

It has been a busy half term for our Equality ambassadors. We began the term by doing an audit of our books that are both on our shelves and the ones we learn about in English. We wanted to see if we have a good range of texts written by both female and male authors and if our texts explore different cultures. We fed back our findings to the English leads and will be adding to our collection soon! We also delivered two different assemblies to the whole school celebrating International Women's Day and Neurodiversity Week. These assemblies allowed the ambassadors to do some of their own research and feed back to the school what they learnt.

We hope you have enjoyed reading about the wonderful activities that have taken place throughout the Spring term.

Our dedicated ambassadors work hard to deliver important messages across school, and we'd like to thank them for occasionally giving up some of their playtime to dedicate time to their role!

We look forward to a jam-packed summer term and celebrating many other successes across school.
